

What Video
& High-Definition TV
AWARDS 2007
WINNER

Projector of 2007 | £1,900 approx

Planar PD7060

A big-value projector that defies its sub-£2,000 price tag with luxurious colours and noise-free playback of HD material

THE PD7060 WAS only the second projector to be launched in the UK by American company, Planar, which makes its resounding triumph all the more remarkable. With its sleek, glossy black finish and rounded curves, the PD7060 won us over with pictures that were every bit blacks on show are anything to go by. There's a six-segment, four-speed colour wheel and host of connections including HDMI, DVI-D, composite video, D-Sub and USB inputs.

Of course, all of these specs count for nought if the pictures aren't up to scratch, so it came resolution offered by high-definition done so much justice for a sub-£2,000 price tag. Colours are vivid, yet completely natural, motion handling is crisp and there's no evidence of interference such as grain or dot crawl.

While there might have been more highly specified projectors launched in 2007 (notably Panasonic's awesome PT-AE1000 and JVC's stunning DCA-HD1) none has been able to match the Planar for sheer value. This is the best movie machine you'll find for the price anywhere on the planet right now: we can't wait to see what their third UK model can do **👍
Reviewed: Issue 322

“By far the best value bigscreen lightbox on the market”

as seductive as its gloriously stylish chassis.

Under the hood, the PD7060 houses Texas Instruments' Dark Chip 3 DLP chipset, which provides a resolution of 1,280 x 720 pixels and boasts a contrast ratio of 3,500:1 – a figure that we believe to be a decidedly conservative estimate if the

as a genuine pleasure to discover that the PD7060 provides a performance that's better than we've any right to expect for the money.

Particularly remarkable is the breathtaking amount of fine detailing on show, especially from high-quality sources. We've never seen the extra

Highly commended

InFocus IN78

An extremely attractive and keenly priced DLP with sensational pictures
Reviewed: Issue 318

01423 359054
www.csesolutions.co.uk